Section of report	Describe the issue	Suggested solution
General	The SEIS has failed to address shortcomings in the economic assessment of the original EIS Section 23 and Appendix V. Section 23 and Appendix V were based on input output modelling (IO) and no cost benefit analysis (CBA) was conducted. While the terms of reference do not specify that CBA must be conducted and that IO should not be, this is clearly against standard economic practice and the DSDIP’s Project Assurance Framework, which states: The primary method of economic evaluation of public sector policies and projects is cost- benefit analysis. Input-output methodology (or the use of multipliers) is not a preferred methodology for economic evaluations. Cost-benefit analysis generally assesses the impact of a project on the economic welfare of the community, and is therefore a key element in any	Conduct thorough and transparent cost benefit analysis of the Kevin’s Corner Project.

	public sector [economic] analysis. (p18) Due to the lack of appropriate economic assessment in the EIS and SEIS, there is no way to judge if the project is in the best interests of the Queensland community. Without addressing this, the project should not continue.
